Bush: Iraq War Made U.S. Safer

President defends decision despite harsh Senate report

OAK RIDGE, TENN. | Invading Iraq made America safer, President Bush said Monday, defending his war decision in the face of a Senate report debunking White House justifications for attacking Saddam Hussein's government.

Bush presented his case in a speech at Oak Ridge National Laboratory.

Three days ago, the Senate Intelligence Committee said the administration's belief that Saddam had chemical and biological weapons and was working to make nuclear weapons was wrong, based on false or overstated CIA analyses.

"Although we have not found stockpiles of weapons of mass destruction, we were right to go into Iraq," Bush told lab employees assembled in an auditorium. "We removed a declared enemy of America who had the capability of producing weapons of mass murder and could have passed that capability to terrorists bent on acquiring them."

It was Bush's first public reaction to the Senate panel's criticism.

Bush noted problems cited in the Senate report, including a shortage of human-gathered intelligence and poor coordination among intelligence services.

But he did not comment on ideas proposed for reforming America's intelligence network, nor did he say when he planned to name a new CIA director to replace George Tenet, who stepped down Sunday for personal reasons. DEB RIECHMANN (AP)

MUSIC | Of Their Own Accordion There's a great job out there awaiting an accordion player. The catch: six weeks in boot camp. The Air Force has been looking for a new accordion player for its Strolling Strings music ensemble since the last one retired two years ago. So far, the search has been fruitless. Chief Master Sgt. Jane Bockenek, the Strolling Strings' music director, said she's looking to recruit at the American Accordionists Association festival in Boston this week. (AP) EyeOpeners | Page 2

CONTESTS

Wet, Sloppy Kisses

It turns out that couple making out on the Red Line last week may have just been practicing for the World Kissing Competition. Officials at the Acquafan park in Riccione, Italy, kicked off the games on Sunday, Reuters reported. Hundreds locked lips in events ranging from "basketball kissing," which we're pretty sure isn't what it sounds like, and underwater kissing, as evidenced by the slowly suffocating couple pictured here. There were no reports of fatalities, although the double-edged sword of amore will likely wound many in time. (EXPRESS)

ANIMAL WATCH

He's 189 Years Young

A 26-year-old mongrel living with an Aboriginal family in Australia's Outback has the potential to become the world's oldest living dog, a newspaper reported Sunday. In August, Jerry, a cross between an Australian cattle dog and a bull terrier, will turn 27—the equivalent of 189 years for a human, Sydney's Daily Telegraph reported. Jerry's owner, Waddie Harris, an Aboriginal tribal leader in the town of Wilcannia in New South Wales state, attributed Jerry's longevity to his high-protein diet of Outback wildlife, including kangaroo and emu, "as well as scraps off the table." (AP)

FEATS OF STRENGTH

A Bit Tired

It's a mound of rubber that would make a monster truck wince, but it wasn't enough to stop Vasily Virastyuk of Ukraine in his tracks. Virastyuk, pictured here during a tire-flipping match, was one of 13 sportsmen from 10 countries to take part in the Strongman Super Series International contest in Moscow on Sunday. Competitors flexed their muscle in eight events, according to the Sydney Morning Herald, including a log lift, a truck pull, a car dead-lift hold and a farmer's walk,

UPDATE

Fish Found

A strong odor led airline officials in Anchorage, Alaska, to what they believe is the 40 pounds of halibut a traveler reported missing from his checked bags two weeks ago. Brenee Davis, a general manager for Continental Airlines in Anchorage, said the company's baggage handlers discovered "a ton of rotting fish" under a luggage conveyor belt recently. There's no way to be certain, but she suspects it was the halibut that Ray Bolanos reported missing from a fish cooler he checked on a flight June 24 from Anchorage to Seattle. The fish was thrown away immediately. "We've gone through a few cans of Lysol," Davis said. Bolanos is calling for further investigation. (AP)

AND STILL NO CURE FOR CANCER: Your kids want soda, but you want them to have fruit. Some Oregon State University researchers are working on a compromise: fizzy fruit. HIV VACCINE RESEARCH. REAL PEOPLE. REAL PROGRESS.

"I'm fighting to stop a killer."

HIV is a killer. I'm a witness. I have buried babies. I have buried old people and young people. People like me, people like you. HIV is serious, so my life's work is helping others learn about it and prevent it.

Today, thousands of researchers, medical professionals and volunteers are committed to discovering a vaccine that prevents HIV and stopping this epidemic. To them, I say, 'Thank you, I'm with you.'

Guantanamo Detainees Informed of Court Access

U.S. officials on Monday began notifying terrorism suspects held at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, that they may use American courts to contest their detention, the Pentagon said. The 594 detainees also were informed, in the same one-page document, that they would be allowed to appear before a military panel to challenge their status as "enemy combatants." (AP)

Senate Spars on Marriage

Republicans disagree on Constitutional amendment's wording

WASHINGTON | Senate Republicans prepared two versions of a constitutional amendment on marriage Monday, unable to agree among themselves on how best to get a vote on a measure that President Bush made an election-year priority for Congress.

The likely outcome is that neither proposal will get a direct vote after Democrats just last week had agreed to allow one.

Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist, R-Tenn., said there was "great interest" among Republicans for a simpler approach that would add only one line to the U.S. Constitution: "Marriage in the United States shall consist only of the union of a man and a woman."

Democrats rejected Frist's request to hold votes on both it and the original version that included another sentence: "Neither this Constitution, nor the constitution of any state, shall be construed to require that marriage or the legal incidence thereof be conferred upon any union other than the union of a man and a woman."

Proponents of the amendment said they included the second sentence to clarify that state legislatures — but not courts — could still establish laws recognizing civil unions and domestic partnerships between two people of the same sex.

The only vote likely to occur now is a procedural one scheduled for Wednesday aimed at forcing the Senate to act on the amendment.

Election Rescheduling Plan Suggested

WASHINGTON | The head of a new federal voting commission suggested to congressional leaders Monday that there should be a process for canceling or rescheduling an election interrupted by terrorism, but National Security Adviser Condoleezza Rice said no such plan is being considered by the administration.

Federal officials warned last week that intelligence indicates al Qaeda wants to attack the United States to disrupt the upcoming elections.

"There does not appear to be a clear process in place to suspend or reschedule voting during an election if there is a major terrorist attack," DeForest B. Soaries, chairman of the U.S. Election Assistance Commission, wrote in a letter to Republican and Democratic leaders in the House of Representatives and Senate. The Associated Press obtained a copy of the letter.

Rice told CNN on Monday that the Bush administration, while concerned about the impact of terrorism, is not thinking of postponing the elections, which are scheduled for early November. (AP)

Logging Changes Proposed

Bush administration looks to change rule on remote forest roads

BOISE, IDAHO | The Bush administration Monday proposed lifting a national rule that closed remote areas of national forests to logging, instead saying states should decide whether to keep a ban on road-building in those areas.

Environmentalists immediately criticized the change as the biggest timber industry giveaway in history.

Under the proposal, governors would have to petition the federal government to block road-building in remote areas of national forests. Allowing roads to be built would open the areas to logging.

The rule replaces one adopted by the Clinton administration and still under challenge in federal court. It covers about 58 million of the 191 million acres of national forest nationwide.

Under the proposal, the 58.5 million acres designated as roadless among the 191 million acres of national forest will be protected from development for another 18 months.

In 2006, each governor may submit a proposal either to continue protecting the roadless land or allow it opened to multiple use. The federal government would then consider each state petition. (AP)

England Has Initial Hearing

Soldier at center of Iraq abuse scandal appears in N.C. court

FORT BRAGG, N.C. | Army Reserve Pfc. Lynndie England, charged with abusing Iraqis at Abu Ghraib prison, was read her rights in court Monday and a military judge set an Aug. 3 hearing to decide if she should face trial.

England answered "Yes, ma'am" when the presiding judge, Col. Denise Arn, asked if she understood her rights and "No, ma'am" when she was asked if she had any questions.

Arn also granted a request by attorney Rick Hernandez to have Army Capt. John Crisp join

A depiction of Pfc. England, right, in court with attorney Rick Hernandez.

England's defense team.

England, 21, of Fort Ashby, W.Va., is charged with abusing prisoners, disobeying an order and indecent acts. Six charges added last week stem from "the creation and possession of sexually explicit photographs." Army officials have said the latest photographs do not involve Iraqi prisoners.

Photos taken at the Abu Ghraib prison that were made public in May show the petite Army reservist smiling and pointing at naked detainees, flashing a thumbs-up and, in one shot, holding a detainee on a dog leash.

The Article 32 hearing will determine whether England faces a court martial, at which witnesses are to be called and evidence presented.

England is one of six soldiers charged in the Abu Ghraib scandal. A seventh, Spc. Jeremy C. Sivits, has already pleaded guilty and been sentenced to a year in prison.

Whooping Cough on The Rise

Government weighs calling for booster shot against disease

WASHINGTON | Whooping cough, one of those ancient scourges that infant vaccination was meant to wipe out, is making a dangerous comeback: It turns out the vaccine that babies get starts wearing off by adolescence.

With outbreaks striking teenagers and adults, the government soon will decide if it's time for booster shots against the cough so violent it can break a rib. Last week, manufacturer GlaxoSmithKline sought U.S. Food and Drug Administration permission to sell a booster.

Whooping cough can kill newborns before they start getting their vaccinations. And while older patients usually recover, they can easily spread the disease, known medically as pertussis, to infants.

In the United States, a preliminary government count found more than 11,000 pertussis cases last year. That's up from 9,771 the previous year, and the most recorded in three decades. LAURAN NEERGAARD (AP)

Filipino Troops to Leave Iraq Soon

Philippines issues appeal to kidnappers of civilian truck driver

MANILA, PHILIPPINES | In a last-minute appeal to Iraqi insurgents threatening to kill a Filipino hostage, a Philippine official said Tuesday his country was willing to pull its troops from Iraq "as soon as possible."

Insurgents have said they would kill truck driver Angelo dela Cruz, 46, on Tuesday if the Philippines did not agree to pull its 51-member peacekeeping force by July 20. The government on Monday restated that its troop commitment ended Aug. 20.

But Philippine Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs Rafael Seguis, speaking on Arab TV Al-Jazeera early Tuesday, said the Philippines would pull its troops out "as soon

When questioned by the newscaster as to when that would be, he said a pullout would come according to the government's commitments. It appeared the statement may have been deliberately ambiguous in a bid to save dela Cruz.

IMMIGRATION SCHEME? An Italian policeman guards the German ship full of African refugees in southern Italy on Monday.

Ship Docks in Italy, Ending Standoff

AGRIGENTO, SICILY | Thirty-seven Africans stranded offshore on an aid agency ship for weeks were allowed to dock Monday. But authorities later arrested two aid workers and indicated that some immigrants lied about coming from Sudan's war-torn Darfur region.

The German aid group Cap Anamur said its ship rescued the men from a broken down vessel in the Mediterranean June 20.

The case won particular attention due to international concern about Darfur, where more than 1 million black Africans have been driven from their homes by largely Arab militias, and up to 30,000 have been killed.

For several days, Italy blocked the ship from docking. But on Monday, it let the Cap Anamur ship dock in Sicily. The first reactions were joy from the immigrants and from groups that had demanded they be allowed into Italy.

Hours later, the situation had changed radically. Police arrested Cap Anamur's chief and a member of the crew for allegedly aiding illegal immigration. A statement from police said the rescued men were from Ghana or Nigeria. (AP)

Blackout Rattles Greece

Worst power outage in years frays nerves ahead of Olympics

ATHENS, GREECE | The worst blackout in more than a decade hit Athens and southern Greece on Monday, leaving millions sweltering in a heat wave and raising concerns about whether the lights will go out at next month's Olympics.

The government blamed the outage on "mismanagement" of the electricity grid. Power was restored to 70 percent of the region in about an hour and to all of Athens in just over three hours.

Officials promised the network was ready to handle the Aug. 13-29 Olympics. But it was yet another hurdle in Athens' attempt to convince the world it is ready to host well-run and safe games. Olympics preparations have come under criticism because of construction delays and concerns over security arrangements to stop terror attacks. (AP)

Sahagun Vows Not To Run

Amid uproar, Mexico's first lady rules out seeking top office

MEXICO CITY | First lady Marta Sahagun on Monday ruled out plans to seek the presidency on her own in 2006, ending speculation that at times has overshadowed the actions of her husband, Vicente Fox.

"I will not be a candidate for presidency of the republic," Sahagun announced at the presidential residence of Los Pinos. "We will go home together" when Fox's term ends on Dec. 1, 2006, she said.

Sahagun

Sahagun had long toyed openly with the idea of a presidential run. Critics complained she was unfairly using her position as first lady as a presidential springboard. Monday's declaration seems to have been prompted by fierce criticism in a July 5 resignation letter by Fox's chief of staff.

"The country has certainly advanced politically, enough that it is ready for a woman to reach the presidency of the republic," Alfonso Durazo said. "Nonetheless, it is not prepared to have the president leave the presidency to his wife." (AP)

Russians Reportedly Considering Yukos Deal

Reports say oil giant offering $8B in back taxes

MOSCOW | Jailed billionaire Mikhail Khodorkovsky returned to the defendants' cage in a Moscow courtroom Monday for the first time since the government moved last week to seize his giant oil company's assets against a huge bill for alleged back taxes.

Meanwhile, the Russian government reportedly was studying a proposal by Khodorkovsky's beleaguered Yukos oil company to pay $8 billion to settle the tax claim over a three-year period.

The media reports, citing unidentified government sources, were the first indications that the government was considering a compromise in the tax dispute that Yukos says could drive it into bankruptcy.

Khodorkovsky, who was arrested in October, and his close associate Platon Lebedev are being tried on charges including tax evasion and fraud in connection with their activities as core Yukos shareholders. Both could face 10 years in prison.

Their joint trial is just one component of a complex web of legal cases against Yukos and its owners, which the government insists is part of a drive against corruption. Many observers, however, say the campaign has more to do with the Kremlin's displeasure over Khodorkovsky's political activities for the opposition and his increasing clout. MARIA DANILOVA (AP)

Morgan Stanley Settles Bias Case

Brokerage firm to pay $54M in claim alleging sex discrimination

NEW YORK | Wall Street brokerage Morgan Stanley agreed Monday to pay $54 million to settle claims of sex discrimination at the firm, including strip-club outings with clients and higher pay for men.

The settlement was announced just as a jury was to hear a trial in the case, brought by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and former Morgan Stanley bond seller Allison Schieffelin.

Schieffelin, who claimed she was denied promotions because she is a woman, will be paid $12 million under the settlement, with $40 million earmarked for claims filed by other women at the firm. Morgan Stanley will also set aside $2 million to pay for diversity training.

Schieffelin outside Manhattan's federal court after the settlement on Monday.

U.S. District Judge Richard M. Berman stressed that he was not ruling on the merits of the case by approving the settlement. In fact, settlement papers say Morgan Stanley denies violating any anti-discrimination law. (AP)

Leucadia Angles for 50% Stake in MCI

NEW YORK | Leucadia National Corp., a holding company, said it will seek antitrust clearance to buy more than 50 percent of the stock in MCI, the nation's No. 2 long-distance carrier.

New York-based Leucadia notified MCI that it intends to make a filing with the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice to purchase the majority stake, MCI said in a brief news release.

MCI changed its name from WorldCom after emerging in April from the nation's largest bankruptcy, which it filed in 2002 after an $11 billion accounting fraud.

Analysts said the disclosure will likely open up MCI to other potential bidders. In June, The Wall Street Journal reported that Sprint, SBC Communications and BellSouth had done preliminary evaluations for buying MCI. (AP)

Vatican Defrocks Fairfax Priest

20 years after facing child-abuse charges, Krafcik is dismissed

MCLEAN, VA. | The Vatican has defrocked a 76-year-old priest who was charged with child abuse 20 years ago and afterward served for nearly a dozen years at a Fairfax parish, the Arlington Diocese announced Monday.

Andrew Krafcik, who was charged with child abuse in Henrico County near Richmond in 1984, was "dismissed from the clerical state" Saturday, according to Arlington Bishop Paul Loverde.

The Vatican's decision means that Krafcik, who retired in 1996, can no longer serve in any ministry, celebrate Mass, administer the sacraments, wear clerical garb or present himself as a priest.

According to the Arlington Diocese, Krafcik was ordained in 1959 by the Richmond Diocese. He sought transfer to the Arlington Diocese in 1984. Later that year, he was charged with child abuse in Henrico County and sentenced by the court to counseling instead of jail time.

Krafcik said he pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge, but he never believed he did anything wrong. He declined to discuss the specifics of the case.

"My lawyer said I made a mistake talking to the detectives. I thought I had nothing to hide," Krafcik said.

WASHINGTON

Ex-Redskin Gets Probation For Possession of Cocaine

Former Washington Redskins player George Starke was sentenced Monday to one year probation and a $50 fine for drug possession. Starke, who was stopped by police May 14 in Northeast D.C., was also ordered to attend drug rehabilitation. At a hearing last month, he pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of crack cocaine possession. Afterward, he told reporters the drugs were not his, and that he pleaded guilty to avoid the expense of a trial. That upset a D.C. Superior Court judge, who on Monday asked Starke if he possessed crack cocaine at the time of his arrest. He admitted he had. (AP)

Rohrer Named Police Chief

A 23-year veteran of the Fairfax County Police Department was handed the top job Monday when the Board of Supervisors voted to make him the new police chief. The appointment of Lt. Col. David M. Rohrer, 47, is effective immediately. He takes the helm of a department with nearly 1,300 sworn officers and 500 civilian employees. (AP)

Fired Park Police Chief Vows to Fight for Her Job

The former chief of the U.S. Park Police Department remains determined to get her job back — vowing Monday her lawyers will talk to "anybody and everybody" who might be responsible for firing her. Teresa Chambers was dismissed Friday, seven months after being suspended and placed on administrative leave for publicly speaking out about a lack of staffing and funds. On Monday, she talked with an administrative law judge who could reinstate her. (AP)

SUMMER STORM | WALKING IN WATER

RAINED OUT: Tom Krausman, left, wades through floodwaters on Monday in Havre De Grace, Md., after a torrential downpour caused flooding, closed streets, stranded motorists and inundated basements, officials said.

Bill Targets Internet-Access Problems

ROCKVILLE, MD. | Montgomery County lawmakers are weighing legislation that requires cable television companies offering Internet access to quickly fix customer problems or face stiff penalties, one of the first attempts in the nation by a local government to regulate cable modem service.

The plan calls for cable companies to restore Internet service within 24 hours of an outage or be forced to give consumers significant rebates. It also allows the county to impose fines on cable companies for violations, but does not impose penalties for problems with the quality or speed of a connection.

The county council is scheduled to vote on the proposal July 27, but cable companies — such as Comcast, which offers cable modem service to Montgomery residents — are trying to attach amendments that would weaken the legislation. They argue the bill is unfair since it doesn't target other types of Internet access and say lawmakers are exaggerating the number of complaints. (AP)

VDOT's Tom Farley explains how the traffic sensors will work along Route 7.

Synchronized Light Plan May Ease Rt. 7 Traffic

ARLINGTON, VA. | It's one of the most congested roads in the Washington, D.C., region, but a plan to synchronize the lights along Route 7 in an effort to provide some relief has the green light.

Virginia Department of Transportation officials said Monday they will install up to 20 overhead video detectors along a 24-mile stretch from Leesburg east to Tysons Corner.

The devices gather traffic data such as how many vehicles are traveling in each lane and how fast they are going.

The digital information is then sent to a VDOT computer. VDOT Administrator Tom Farley said the goal is to allow commuters to travel through several green lights without stopping.

The detectors can extend the green lights by several seconds when there is no traffic waiting on side streets. HEATHER GREENFIELD (AP)

Md. Lawmaker Wants D.C. Baseball

WASHINGTON | The effort to lure a Major League Baseball team to the nation's capital has the support of at least one Maryland lawmaker.

Montgomery County Council member Howard A. Denis, R-District 1, has proposed a resolution that would put the county on record as supporting a team in D.C. The council is expected to act on the resolution Tuesday.

"Nothing against Loudoun County, [Va.], but that's just too far away," said Denis. "Moreover, the way they're talking they don't even seem to want us." (AP)

TYPE 2 DIABETES

Giving Medications a Try

Living with Diabetes is not easy. Sometimes the proper diet and the right exercise are not enough.

Local physicians are participating in a research study with an investigational medication to see if it safely and effectively helps control blood sugar levels.

To be considered, you must be trying to manage your diabetes through diet and exercise alone, and not currently on an oral antidiabetic medication.

If you qualify, you will receive all study-related care (at no charge) (including physical examinations, laboratory services) and study medication.

Ball, Band & Barf Bag

TRAVEL | Imagine an airplane full of passengers, floating high above the Eastern seaboard somewhere, squeezing their glutes and flexing their pecs.

That's what Song airlines envisions, at least. Starting later this month, for an $8 fee, Song will offer passengers an elastic band and a squeezable ball to use for exercise while sitting in their seat. A how-to manual, designed by gym owner David Barton, 40, will guide them through a workout.

Launched last year by parent company Delta, Song is hoping to sweat it out with rival JetBlue, which recently matched an existing yoga program with Pilates to ease the tensions of contemporary American travel.

Barton said in-flight exercise comes naturally. "Once on a long haul flight to London, I pulled out my band," he said of his first attempt to flex his pecs on board. "I thought people would be annoyed, but they were envious and curious."

With their ball and band, Barton said, passengers can work the whole body in their seats without irritating their neighbors. "I often wish that the person sitting next to me would have something better to do than talk." DESMOND BUTLER (AP)

LIVE ONLINE

Moving Crew

Talk fitness with the Post Health staff, aka THE MOVING CREW, every other Tuesday at 2 p.m. on washingtonpost.com/liveonline.

Is it better to eat before or after exercising?

You want some fuel in your body, but if you eat regularly (and healthily) you can go for a morning run before breakfast and have sufficient energy. Most experts recommend eating 45 to 75 minutes after exercise.

What can you tell me about exercising when pregnant?

As long as you have your doctor's approval, exercise within reason during pregnancy will likely keep you feeling better and better able to control your weight gain. The American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology recommends pregnant women exercise at 50 to 60 percent of maximum heart rate for 20 to 30 minutes two or three times a week. You can do a very rough calculation of maximum heart rate by subtracting your age from 220. Unfortunately, the formula doesn't take into account the higher resting heart rate of pregnant women. Check out their Web site, www.acog.org, for more info.

What benefits do you get from rowing machines? Is it really cardio?

In addition to the aerobic benefits, rowing machines tone and challenge the arms, shoulders and back (the legs a little bit, too). So rowing is an efficient way to spend time in the gym.

Return of the rhythm method: Cycle beads look like a necklace, but are a new form of old-style family planning. In today's Washington Post, Health section.

HURTS SO GOOD: Endorphins released while tanning can allay skin cancer fears.

Happiness Is A Warm Tan

TANNING | Researchers at Wake Forest University in North Carolina found that people who like to tan experience a warm feeling of well-being that encourages the practice. In a study published this month in the Journal of the American Academy of Dermatology, Dr. Steven Feldman and colleagues report that UV light gives people a relaxed feeling that draws them to sunlight despite the serious risk of skin cancer.

Feldman's team studied 14 avid tanners who frequented tanning salons year-round, several times a week. The researchers had their subjects use two different beds at two weekly sessions: One bed exposed the tanners to UV light; the other did not, but they looked identical so the tanners couldn't tell the difference. The subjects were then allowed a third session using the bed of their choice; 95 percent of the time, they chose to use the bed with UV light.

"We know that UV light has a physiologic effect, something at least some people find reinforcing," Feldman said. Findings show that skin cells release endorphins when exposed to ultraviolet light. Endorphins are body chemicals that work like a natural opiate, making people feel good. (AP)

Personal Tech

It Knows Where You Live

The Web is tailoring itself to your location

SURFING | Type "dentist" into Google in New York and you'll get ads for dentists in the city. Try watching a Cubs baseball game from a computer in Chicago, and you'll be stymied by pre-existing local TV rights.

The World Wide Web experience is becoming less and less worldwide: What you see and what you are allowed to do these days can depend greatly on where and even who you are.

As so-called geolocation technology improves, Web sites are increasingly blocking groups of visitors and carving the Web into smaller chunks — in some cases, down to a ZIP code or employer.

Each computer on the Internet has a unique numeric address akin to a phone number. It's generally assigned to the user's Internet service provider, a university or a company, and a database matches such assignments to the location the network has registered.

But a company's addresses may all be registered to headquarters, though it has branch offices worldwide. So companies like Digital Envoy Inc., Quova Inc. and Akamai Technologies Inc. refine that database, tracing data packets as they zip through "traffic cops" known as routers, thus narrowing the actual location of each address.

Geolocation's proponents say the technology makes the Internet more meaningful to a global audience. AOL can distribute Web traffic more efficiently, while MSNBC.com is thinking of customizing news by time zones.

Geolocation isn't meant to help companies be evasive, said Andy Champagne of Akamai. "It's meant for the 99 percent of the general public who are just at home surfing." ANICK JESDANUN (AP)

Understanding IP addresses

Computers connected to the Internet have a unique address — like a phone number — known as an Internet Protocol (IP) address that can be used to approximate the machines' location.

→ IP addresses consist of four numbers between 0 and 255 with about 4.3 billion possible combinations and are divided into classes.

→ Large networks like communications companies and research institutions obtain large blocks of addresses, dividing them into subnetworks and distributing them as they see fit.

→ The last number identifies a specific machine on the subnetwork.

X X X . X X X . X X X . X X X

→ Smaller networks like universities and businesses acquire more defined blocks of IP addresses to distribute among their users.

→ Geolocation companies track how networks distribute addresses to the computers on the network.

I own a Mac. Palm or Pocket PC?

Palm. You can sync a Pocket PC, but you'll need to buy some extra software to make it happen.

I just installed a home wireless network linking four computers. Do I need to install firewalls on all four?

Your WiFi router may already contain a built-in firewall. Visit grc.com, click "Shields Up!" and run the security tests; if you don't find any open ports, you're protected. If not, check the router manual to see if a firewall can be enabled. If not, you should install the free version of ZoneAlarm on each computer.

What's your take on those USB keyring things? Are they going to flop like Zip disks did?

They've pretty much won the contest to replace the floppy disk.

I saw a $70 gizmo at Best Buy that lets you plug your laptop in on an airplane or car. Where in the plane can you plug this in?

These power adapters supposedly work on the outlets in individual seatrests, but not all airlines offer them.

Remote Viewing

REVIEW | A new remote control, Snapstream Media's Firefly, makes playing a computer's music, videos, TV programs and photos as easy from a couch as it is from an uncomfortable office chair.

Like Microsoft's Media Center, SnapStream brings together disparate programs with one key difference: Firefly can run on any recent Windows PC, not just those decked out to Microsoft's Media Center specifications.

The Firefly package relies on additional programs to handle video, songs and pictures. Most are free or already bundled with Windows 98 or later. Some features, such as watching live TV, require additional hardware and software.

An abundance of options makes the $50 Firefly more appealing than Media Center, which isn't available as a standalone program.

The remote uses a radio frequency signal that has a range of 30 feet and can pass through walls, unlike most other clickers, which are infrared devices.

Firefly's Beyond Media Basic program is launched simply by hitting the "Firefly" button on the remote. That brings up an attractive, full-screen directory for turning on the PC's DVD player, jukebox and other programs.

To use Apple's iTunes, you have to rely on a "Mouse" button, which turns the remote into a mouse-like pointing device using buttons for up-and-down and left-and-right movements as well as two other buttons for left- and right-clicking. It would be cumbersome to have to use it repeatedly.

Boss your PC or Mac around with a remote.

FireFly launches SnapStream's Beyond TV for watching and recording television programs, provided you buy the extra software and hardware. MATTHEW FORDAHL (AP)

READY TO ROLL: Joy Wallis, nicknamed Tinkerhell, co-captain of the "Hell Marys," stretches her legs and laces up before roller derby competition in Austin, Texas.

Hell on Wheels

Once a kitschy relic, roller derbies are back — with a vengeance

AUSTIN, TEXAS | The teams have names like the Honky Tonk Heartbreakers and the Hell Marys. The players are decked out in miniskirts and torn fishnet tights — and some are dressed as wayward Catholic school girls or wild rodeo queens.

And the matches offer a kind of controlled mayhem, put to flashing lights and loud music.

Roller derby — the campy "sport" that filled low-rent arenas from the 1930s to the 1970s — is back, rowdier and more raucous than ever.

"Faster, faster, go, go, go!" the crowd chants at a bout featuring the Texas Rollergirls, one of two all-female leagues competing in Austin.

The crowd is into it, literally: With fans only inches from the track, skaters frequently fly into the audience. Men in red shirts rush to clean up any beer spilled by spectators who get slammed. Then a jolly announcer reminds fans that there's plenty more beer for sale.

The new leagues are offering their own twist on the roller derby tradition, with racy costumes and live music. Teams have been popping up in Texas, Arizona, Seattle and Los Angeles; fans of all ages have made Austin a roller derby hotbed.

LIKE A RECORD, BABY: Derby competitors circle the track during a match.

There's athleticism, to be sure. Skaters jockey for position and ram into each other while racing around the track. Packs of skaters try to propel their "jammer," a player who earns points for lapping opponents.

But there's also a hint of professional wrestling, as outrageously named skaters — check out Dee Generate and Reyna Terror — tangle theatrically. "Think WWE meets burlesque meets the X-Games," says the Texas Rollergirls Web site.

The Texas Rollergirls league, owned and operated by the skaters, consists of 60 women on four teams. Along with provocative outfits, the women, most of them in their 20s and 30s, wear helmets, kneepads and protective mouthpieces. They also own and operate the league.

Costuming and drama — including an occasional "fight" that can earn a skater a soft spanking with a cardboard paddle — are part of the attraction of the slightly risqué derby.

Roller derby isn't just about being showy; it involves solid skating and maneuvering, said Vendetta von Dutch, blocker for the Hotrod Honeys.

"Anything can happen," she said. "It's all about multitasking and reaction time."

Vendetta is actually Julie Underwood, a 32-year-old elementary school teacher who moved from Dallas to Austin to live the roller derby life.

The teams hold regular practices, but fights aren't choreographed, and the skating competition is real, said Melissa Joulwan, the freelance writer known as Melicious.

The games have some trappings of other sports — referees, printed programs and a solemn singing of the National Anthem.

The current equation seems to be working. A typical competition draws 1,100 spectators.

"People told their friends, and they told their friends, and now we have normal people, too," Joulwan said. KELLEY SHANNON (AP)

Shall We Play a Game?

CHICAGO | Some cozy up at coffee houses to challenge friends to a game of Monopoly or, perhaps, Battleship. Others gather in pubs for a rowdy night of trivia, with prizes ranging from bragging rights to baseball tickets.

"Game night" has become the rage in many U.S. cities, as people search for new ways to socialize beyond the traditional bar scene.

"Everyone really gets into it," said Samantha Donaldson, a 25-year-old government worker who recently began competing in the packed "quizzo trivia night" at the Penn. Avenue Pour House in the District. She's enjoyed answering questions that test her breadth of knowledge, such as one category that challenged players to identify famous people with the initials "J.J." (James Joyce and Jermaine Jackson among them).

But quiz night is just one version of game night.

At the Whistle Stop Bar in San Diego, patrons can play old standbys, from Candyland to Uno, during "games & grooves" night. And several W hotels, including those in New York, San Francisco and Honolulu, have placed board games in their lobbies for guests to use.

The fad seems to be having an impact on sales of "adult" board games.

They were up 5 percent in 2003, compared with the previous year, according to The NPD Group, a research firm that tracks toy and game sales. That's a notable increase, say those in the industry, since overall toy sales fell about 3 percent during the same period.

DO NOT PASS GO: Ryoko Patrascu, 17, of Chicago, left, and Victoria Marsezalik, 18, of Harwood Heights, Ill., play the ancient Chinese board game of Go in Evanston, Ill.

Clemens, Piazza Get Reacquainted

Old rivals will be on the same side during the All-Star Game

BASEBALL | At least Mike Piazza will be wearing a mask, shinguards and a chest protector when Roger Clemens throws at him Tuesday night.

From the very first pitch, this All-Star game will provide one of baseball's most intriguing scenarios: Clemens and Piazza, together again.

With their feud still seemingly unresolved from 2000 — Clemens beamed Piazza in the regular season, then threw the jagged barrel of a broken bat toward him in the World Series — they have no choice but to work together. The Rocket will start for the National League, his nemesis will catch.

"I don't know if we're going to be playing golf anytime soon," Piazza said. "But we've got a job to do."

Both players tried to deflect attention to other All-Star themes, such as how the winner gets home-field advantage in the World Series and the presence of 500-homer guys Barry Bonds, Sammy Sosa and Rafael Palmeiro.

But when Ichiro Suzuki steps in to lead off the 75th All-Star game, chances are all the attention will be on Clemens and Piazza.

Will Clemens shake off Piazza? Will he accidentally bounce a split-finger fastball? Clemens said he'd take the same approach he would with any catcher. "I'm sure we'll go over the first handful of hitters," the Houston ace said.

That might be the most involved discussion they've had in a while.

After hitting Piazza in the helmet with a fastball at Yankee Stadium, Clemens tried to phone the New York Mets star. But Piazza did not take the call, and the rift began to grow.

Then in Game 2 of the World Series, a truly bizarre scene occurred when Piazza shattered his bat and Clemens fired a piece of it in his direction. Clemens was fined $50,000, and the pair have not spoken since.

They have, however, talked about each other — albeit reluctantly.

Asked whether he could understand why fans might find this such so interesting, Clemens said, "No, I don't. I'm pitching with him now, we are on the same team, so pretty much it's not a story," he said.

BASEBALL

DuPuy: Expos Moving in '05

Bob DuPuy, baseball's No. 2 official expressed confidence Monday that the Montreal Expos will move before the 2005 season but wouldn't set a new deadline for a decision. Baseball at first hoped for a decision by July 2002 but later pushed it back to the 2003 All-Star break and then to this year's break. Washington and Northern Virginia appear to be the top contenders for the Expos. (AP)

Big Unit Open to Trade

Randy Johnson said on Monday he would consider waiving his no-trade clause if the Arizona Diamondbacks want to deal him to a contender. "The only way I would probably want to leave would be that I'm benefiting the Diamondbacks in leaving," he said. Anaheim, Boston and the New York Yankees are likely candidates for a deal. (AP)

LAST CHANCE: Making a last-ditch effort to retain Carlos Boozer, the Cleveland Cavaliers have offered him a one-year contract worth about $5 million amid reports he will part ways with his agent. The Associated Press has learned. The power forward agreed to a $68 million offer from the Utah Jazz last week after Boozer vowed to re-sign in Cleveland. (AP)

Commissioner Selects Adu for All-Star Game

SOCCER | Teenage star Freddy Adu of D.C. United was one of 15 reserves picked Monday for the MLS All-Star team.

MLS commissioner Don Garber added him to the team, along with the league's career goals leader, Jason Kreis of the Dallas Burn. The other 13 reserves were picked by the coaches.

Adu, a 15-year-old forward, has started just six of the team's 16 games this season and has scored two goals. Still, Adu has sparked interest in MLS unlike any player in its nine-year history.

He is the highest paid player in the league, making $500,000 per year in salary and bonuses, and D.C. United easily leads the league in road attendance.

Other United members on the team — coached by D.C.'s Peter Nowak — are forward Alecko Eskandarian and midfielders Ben Olsen and Bobby Convey. (AP)

L.A. Waits for Kobe's Pick

PRO BASKETBALL | Lakers owner Jerry Buss has not spoken to Kobe Bryant since the NBA Finals, and he still has no idea — despite the departure of coach Phil Jackson and the impending trade of Shaquille O'Neal — whether Bryant will re-sign.

The Lakers hope to learn in the next day or so whether Bryant plans to accept their seven-year, $130 million contract offer or sign with another team. The Los Angeles Clippers have been mentioned as Bryant's most likely alternate destination.

The Lakers' decisions to part ways with Jackson and trade O'Neal to Miami have been seen as attempts to placate Bryant, the 25-year-old superstar whose relationships with his fellow superstar and coach deteriorated over the years.

But Buss insisted Bryant was not the driving force behind those moves. "The decision with Phil and the decision with Shaq was made totally independent of Kobe," Buss said firmly. "Kobe has never at any time ever told me that Phil or Shaq had any influence on his decision where he would like to play."

Chechnya after a Decade of Destruction

The United States Holocaust Memorial Museum's Committee on Conscience has issued a Genocide Watch for Chechnya.

Wednesday, July 14 | 7 p.m.

Since 1994, Chechnya has faced two wars and the destruction of its cities, infrastructure, economy, health system, and security, with little sustained effort to rebuild. A panel of experts examines whether a society can survive a decade of destruction.

Tour de France Bars 2 for Doping

CYCLING | Two cyclists being investigated in doping cases were ejected from the Tour de France on Monday, a decision one of the riders said was "cruel."

Tour director Jean-Marie Leblanc said Stefano Casagrande and Martin Hvastija would not start Tuesday's ninth stage. Hvastija was 124th in the standings, and Casagrande 155th.

"I don't understand such a cruel decision," Hvastija said. He said Italian investigators bugged a conversation he had in 2001 about a recently banned substance and that Leblanc was aware of it and "respected the decision of my director" to let him race. (AP)

A Tale of 2 Courses at Royal Troon

British Open site has easy start, wicked finish

GOLF | Tiger Woods played one practice round on what seemed like two courses Monday.

He walked to the 10th tee at the far end of Royal Troon and turned to face a fresh breeze off the Irish Sea. Then, staring ahead at a blind tee shot over mounds of prickly bushes on a 438-yard hole that begins one of the most daunting back nines in the British Open, Woods said, "That was the JV; this is the varsity."

The outward nine plays with the prevailing wind and is only 3,462 yards with two par 5s, one of them reachable in two with as little as a 7-iron. The inward nine is 3,713 yards and plays into the teeth of the wind, yet it has only one par 5.

This Jekyll & Hyde links will hold its eighth British Open starting Thursday, with the focus on Woods trying to end his 0-for-8 drought in the major championships, Phil Mickelson attempting to add to an illustrious season that already includes a green jacket, and Ernie Els with another outside chance to become No. 1 in the world.

Mostly, the attention will be directed to the crackle of flags atop the clubhouse. After all, the official club history is titled "The Breezy Links o' Troon." DOUG FERGUSON (AP)

CRAZY EIGHTS: If Tiger Woods is going to snap his 0-for-8 majors slump at, he will have to conquer the challenging course at Royal Troon over the weekend.

Improving on Reality

'Big Brother' and 'The Amazing Race' just keep getting better

FUN AND GAMES | Now that the genre recognized as "reality TV" is firmly ensconced on the prime-time docket, the shows are in cut-throat competition to prove their staying power. While most reality premises have begun cannibalizing themselves in a series of increasingly cruel yet uninteresting twists, two shows whose fifth seasons premiered last week stand out, one for learning from its previous mistakes; the other for striding across the reality landscape confident in its premise and execution.

Admired for its novelty but not particularly watchable, "Big Brother" debuted with Darwinian intentions. The idea was to plunk mismatched contestants in a stark, ill-equipped house and watch them forage for food — a chicken yard was one feature — and turn on one another like scorpions in a jar, all under the watchful eye that gave the show its title.

But the producers quickly realized that social and material privation are two different premises, and goofy contests in a well-appointed funhouse were more entertaining than half-starved griping in a dump. Since then, "Big Brother" pulled up its socks and began to use its diverse casts to point up the differences and to force bonding among a cross-section of America's camera hogs.

"BB5" (tonight at 8 p.m., CBS) may be the best one yet — even its twists (two housemates are half-siblings, unbeknownst to both; and a set of twins does secret single duty) help create intriguing subsets among the housemates.

But among the reality cognoscenti, "The Amazing Race" (tonight at 9 p.m., CBS) breezes off with the gold. The premise is horribly complicated (couples race around the globe with limited amounts of money, competing along the way) but the execution terrifically smooth, especially considering its executive producer is fireball film king Jerry Bruckheimer.

The producers of "TAR" look for pairs whose stories might be told in delicious captions. "Dating Christian models" (Brandon and Nicole, virgin posers) takes the prize this year. "Cousins" seems self-explanatory at first, but Charla is a little person and cousin Mirna is full-sized, and Charla's the tough one, claiming to want to break down stereotypes in one breath and snickering that strangers will always help her in another.

If the appeal of reality shows is to root for contestants or to project oneself into the competition, then "TAR" brings both these ideas together seamlessly. Who knew Bruckheimer could make the world his playground, then make viewers feel at home? ARION BERGER (EXPRESS)

Blimey, It's: 'Oliver!'

When it comes to musicals featuring lovable orphans with British accents, "Oliver!" is the gold standard. Fresh from London, this production earns its exclamation point with rousing renditions of "Food, Glorious Food" and "I'd Do Anything."

Wolf Trap, Filene Center, 1551 Trap Road, Vienna; Tues.-Sun., 8 p.m., Sat. & Sun., 2 p.m., $18-$60; 703-218-6500.

Crikey! Sooty greasepaint, silly accents, adorable urchins — it must be "Oliver!"

A Shoulder to Cry On: Ingram Hill

Has love ever gotten you down? Ever been driven to tears by the lack of those cute plaid shorts at the Abercrombie clearance sale? College rockers Ingram Hill's ear-pleasing, self-described "Southern-pop" offers something for every broken heart.

Iota Club & Café, 2832 Wilson Blvd., Arlington; with Nini Camps, 8 p.m., $10; 703-522-8340. (Clarendon)

Documenting History: Hussein Trial Photog

Karen Ballard just flew in from Iraq, and boy are her arms tired ... of holding up a camera to photograph Saddam Hussein's extraordinary trial. The renowned photojournalist discusses recent experiences with help from a timely slide show.

'Havana': A Bridge Too Dull

A Cuban-American project redeemed by beautiful voices

MUSIC | "Bridge to Havana" (Pyramid Records) is a compilation of songs written and recorded in Havana in 1999 by an eclectic group of Cuban and American artists, including Bonnie Raitt, Jimmy Buffett and Buena Vista Social Club's Omara Portuondo.

Unfortunately, some tracks resort to a fairly generic Latin sound, relying on a humbled percussion section, lots of guitar strumming and innocuous lyrics.

Rhymes like "Come so far from Tennessee/to meet my Cuban family" and sentiments like "love transcends geography" from "Que Importa" are sincere, but too plainly stated.

And mentions of defunct outfits like the Spice Girls and Public Enemy as good listening dates the album.

But beautiful voices are its greatest asset. It's a treat to hear Gladys Knight again, Montell Jordan croons superbly and the husky, smoldering-fire that is Joan Osborne's voice, backed by stellar horns and a more confident rhythm section, make "Just to Be Alone With You" a standout track. AIMEE MAUDE SIMS (AP)

Keane on America

UP-AND-COMING | Last fall, British trio Keane was the beneficiary of a great treat. American band Rooney, which was supporting Travis on its North American tour, couldn't make the Toronto show on Halloween. Called upon at the last minute to fill in for a one-off show, Keane nailed its performance before an attentive, sold-out crowd.

"It was a fantastic night for us," said pianist Tim Rice-Oxley. "We learned a lot from them and a lot of good things came to us from that night."

So good, in fact, that Morrissey closed his recent performance at London's Meltdown Festival by reportedly saying, "If there's anyone with the surname Keane, they better leave the building now." The statement referred to the band's debut album, "Hopes and Fears," which kept his own "You Are the Quarry" from debuting at No. 1 on the U.K. album chart.

Pianist Rice-Oxley, drummer Richard Hughes, lead singer Tom Chaplin and guitarist Dominic Scott

formed Keane in 1997 in East Sussex. (Scott has since left the band.) Taking their name from Cherry Keane, an elderly lady who encouraged the boys to follow their rock-star dreams, the childhood friends were signed to independent British label Fierce Panda in late 2002.

"Hopes and Fears" was released internationally in May via Universal-Island, on the heels of the hit singles "Somewhere Only We Know" and "Everybody's Changing." The set is off to a strong start in North America, a development that Rice-Oxley says is especially rewarding.

"It's not like the build up we've had in the U.K.," he said. "We're playing relatively small clubs but they've all been either sold-out or nearly full. It's kind of surreal."

The album's name comes from "Snowed Under," an import-only B-side. "It's just a nice way of summing up what you think about in your life," Rice-Oxley said of the title. "Eventually everything you do is made up of hopes and fears. And that balance between hopes and fears and the fusion between the two we really liked." JASON MACNEIL (BILLBOARD)

Eastwood, Spielberg On Iwo Jima

COLLABORATIONS | Clint Eastwood and Steven Spielberg reportedly are joining forces to bring the World War II battle of Iwo Jima to the big screen.

According to TV Guide, Eastwood will direct an adaptation of the book "Flags of Our Fathers: Heroes of Iwo Jima" for Spielberg's company DreamWorks.

The book was written by James Bradley — whose father was one of the six soldiers who raised the flag at Iwo Jima — and Ron Powers.

The battle of Iwo Jima in February-March 1945 was crucial for both sides. The Volcano Islands, which include Iwo Jima, were 700 miles south of Tokyo and part of the capital prefecture — thus the first part of Japan proper to be invaded.

The Americans wanted its three airstrips as a way station for long-range bombing raids on Tokyo, and for the invasion of Okinawa.

Mount Suribachi, a 550-foot dead volcano at the tiny, tear-drop-shaped island's southern tip, was where five Marines and a Navy corpsman raised the flag on the third day and were captured on film by Associated Press photographer Joe Rosenthal. (AP)

Disabled D.C. Group Aims For Grammy

LOCAL MUSIC | With the backing of recording industry insiders, a group of mentally retarded D.C. residents is shooting for a Grammy nod.

The Inspirational Choir and Moroccan Ensemble was approached two years ago by Indian musician Broto Roy about recording a song at the Art and Drama Therapy Institute in Northeast, a medically supervised facility overseen by the D.C. Department of Human Services.

Roy co-wrote the single "Let Us Fly" with Dr. Margaret Dickinson, CEO and clinical director of ADTI. The tune was recorded in March by Christopher Murphy, a sound engineer and nominating member of the Grammy Awards. He plans to submit a bid for a best original song nomination. MATT RUTHERFORD (AP)

Queer Eyes, Meet Your U.K. Rivals

The Brits are eating up the dish on the popular makeover show, featuring Grooming Guru Tristan Eves, Design Doctor Dane Bailey, Fashion Savant Julian Bennett, Culture Vulture Jason Gardiner and Food and Wine Connoisseur

The U.S. broadcast will translate the Britishisms and keep viewers apprised of the show's twists and in-jokes.

On tonight's episode, the other Fab Five help straight guy voice-over artist Barra acquire enough poise and style to step out from behind the mic. (EXPRESS)

"Thirst" offers coverage of three anti-privatization efforts: in Stockton, Calif., the Bolivian city of Cochabamba and India's Rajasthan state. A serious film with a definite point of view, "Thirst" fails to answer one question: If corporations buy up all of our water, will they

Film Channel) Sean Penn narrates this 2001 documentary, a glimpse at the talented teenagers who inadvertently invented skateboarding culture during the 1970s. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Movin' On Up to the Deluxe Apartment in the Sky

ISABEL SANFORD, 86, best known as Louise "Weezy" Jefferson on "The Jeffersons," died of natural causes Friday in Los Angeles, her publicist said Monday. Her daughter was at her side. Sanford's health had waned after undergoing preventive surgery on a neck artery 10 months ago. In 1981, Sanford became the first black woman to receive an Emmy for Best Actress in a Comedy Series. Recently, she lent her voice to "The Simpsons" and appeared in commercials for Denny's and Old Navy. (AP)

Actors have made yet more inroads into world government. WILL SMITH recently called Kofi Annan to offer his services to the United Nations, reported Reuters. "I don't know what I can do. I just know that America is a better place than the reputation we're getting internationally right now," Smith said. "Acting is kind of a steppingstone to whatever that greater purpose is." He searched for his greater purpose in Mexico City on Monday. (EXPRESS)

Police are investigating possible fraud committed in connection with the cancellation of what was advertised as a LIZA MINNELLI concert in Budapest, Hungarian authorities said Monday. More than 70 concertgoers complained to police that no one at the concert venue offered refunds for the tickets even though Minnelli did not perform. Police are investigating whether Minnelli actually canceled her performance or whether she was never engaged to appear in the first place. Only a few hundred tickets were sold for the event. (AP)

"You will never hear me ask what someone is wearing again," said PAT O'BRIEN, talking about his new syndicated entertainment show, "The Insider." O'Brien confirmed to AP reporters that he'll host Paramount Domestic Television's new nightly half-hour newsmagazine, which premieres Sept. 13. "It was time to move on," he said in a phone interview Friday. He has hosted "Access Hollywood" since 1997.

"The Insider" will be "more newsy, unpredictable, with longer interviews," O'Brien said. "It will not be tabloid. If it gets tabloid, you'll see me get in my pickup truck and leave town. You can hold me to that." (AP)

Anthony Pays $20K Bill 2 Years Late, Still Owes Tip

MARC ANTHONY has offered to pay a $20,000 bill at a Puerto Rican nightclub to settle a lawsuit, a spokeswoman said Monday. Last week, Anthony was sued in a Puerto Rican court for a 2002 party thrown by Anthony and his then-wife. The lawsuit alleged that "due to personal problems" Anthony declined to pay. (AP)

Anthony earned enough to pay off his tab before he even finished this song.

'Garden State'

From washingtonpost.com/liveonline

ZACH BRAFF, star of the NBC comedy "Scrubs," was online Monday to discuss "Garden State," a film he wrote and directed, about a young man who reconnects with family and friends after the death of his mother.

How did you prepare to direct? Do you prefer directing or acting?

First and foremost, I set out to be a filmmaker. I went to film school at Northwestern University, and all I ever really wanted to do was make movies. So this is my first chance after "Scrubs" to finally get back to what I set out to do. And I love to do both, so I'm hoping I'll get a chance to do both in the future.

What made you choose this topic?

I've been to maybe a dozen funerals in my life and I was always struck by how there'd be all the people mourning the death at the grave site and 20 yards away, there'd be two guys on a tractor checking their watch. That was always really upsetting to me. It also showed how different two people can be, as far as where they are in their minds. So that was one of the seeds for the idea of the movie.

Your character on "Scrubs" is so adorable! Are you that dorky and uncoordinated in person? Are you as witty in person?

I always say that acting is like turning up the volume on different parts of your personality. So playing J.D. is just cranking the silly, goofy, neurotic parts of myself. But witty, yes.

Just wanted to compliment you on your sense of comedic timing — it's the main reason to watch "Scrubs." How did you develop this talent?

I went to what's called the "Three's Company" school of acting — I just watched every episode of "Three's Company" and every episode of "Gilligan's Island."

TO THE EDITOR

YOUR ARTICLE ON "Amish in the City" (July 12) is headlined "NBC to Air Amish Show," but the content of the story led me to believe otherwise. You said the show would have a July 28 special on UPN. But the story ends with "An NBC plan for a similar show was dropped." So is there a mistake here or am I just lost?

—DOMINO BLASKE
Forestville, Md.

Editor's Note: No, there's a mistake here. "Amish in the City" will air July 28 on UPN, not NBC.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — You may have a violently different attitude about commonplace events and developments from others.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — You may not know just how to express yourself, but after some careful probing a good friend will be able to tap a wellspring of good ideas.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — A family affair may get off on the wrong foot later in the day, but you will know just how to get things back on track in no time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — Get down to basics once again. A realistic approach to even the most dreamy and implausible ideas can pay off for you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — Someone close to you wants to be in the lead. Give him or her a little more responsibility and authority.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Don't let communication break down; work to re-establish that which has been lost and to improve your own listening skills.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — You needn't make excuses for yourself; that which others accept is known, and that which they don't will be forgiven in time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Create a plan and stick to it. Self-discipline is important — and it can lead to increased freedom and creativity in the long run.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — Is it a hang-up or simply personal preference? It's a good idea to answer such questions before pursuing a new desire.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Keep your mind on your own practical needs, even as you stretch your wings and strive for something a little more heady and artistic.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — That which has been most elusive will be clarified before this day is out. The answer to a complex question now lies before you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — You may find it difficult to overlook even the slightest offense, but any kind of overreaction on your part will only backfire on you.

BREATHE CLEAN AIR • REDUCE DUST & MOLD

CYPRUS AIR, FOR AIR DUCT CLEANING YOU CAN TRUST!

IS THE AIR YOU BREATHE IN YOUR HOME MAKING YOU SICK?

Your duct system functions as the respiratory system of your home. When it becomes contaminated and congested, it should be cleaned so it can 'breathe' normally and efficiently. If you answer yes to any of the following questions, it may be time to have your air duct system professionally cleaned.

- ☐ Does anyone in the house have allergies, asthma, or other respiratory problems?
- ☐ Does anyone in your family suffer from headaches, nasal congestion, or other sinus problems at night or in the morning?
- ☐ Is there a smoker in the house?
- ☐ Do you have dogs, cats or other pets?
- ☐ Do you notice "musty" or "stale" odors when the furnace or air conditioner runs?
- ☐ Do you notice dust on your furniture shortly after cleaning?
- ☐ Does it seem like there is not enough air flow coming from your vents?
- ☐ Is your furnace equipped only with a standard throw-away fiberglass filter?
